A community of just over 200 students, in which there is a real possibility to forge lasting friendships and professional contacts.

A photograph of a man standing at the front of a classroom, speaking into a microphone. He is wearing a striped shirt and glasses. A large group of students is seated at desks in the background, listening attentively. The image is in grayscale with a light gray overlay.

Training professionals in the areas of international relations and diplomacy, global governance, development and international security, as well as related public policy topics, has been a goal of IBEI since its creation.

Narcís Serra,
IBEI President

Letter from the President and the Director

Narcís Serra & Jacint Jordana

This annual report 2019 details the most relevant activities undertaken at IBEI during the year. The report highlights that activities have grown across multiple fronts, both in advanced research and graduate teaching. One of the most significant initiatives during the year was the launch of a new master's programme, the 120 ECTS Research Master's in International Studies (RMIS), to be completed in four semesters. This is a challenging initiative not only because it is the first two-year master delivered exclusively by IBEI, but also because this master reflects the growth in research activity at IBEI over recent years. As such, the RMIS clearly contributes to building a bridge between the two main pillars at IBEI, teaching and research, establishing a sound connection between them while also enriching both.

IBEI has been gaining momentum as a European graduate school in International studies. Students from all corners of the world come to Barcelona to enrol in one of the masters' programmes offered, increasingly from countries beyond Europe. IBEI's training programmes also brings many more interesting people to Barcelona.

For example, in 2019 IBEI organized -or co-organized- five summer schools, covering areas as diverse as science diplomacy, Euro-Asian relations, or Innovation and Governance in Latin America, thus providing an impressive range of courses and learning activities. Additionally, executive and advanced training are becoming recurrent activities at IBEI, with participants from different parts of the world, but particularly from Latin America.

Training professionals in the areas of international relations and diplomacy, global governance, development and international security, as well as related public policy topics, has been a goal of IBEI since its creation. Our masters' programmes consolidate sound scientific knowledge with multiple professional experiences and technical perspectives on how to operate on the ground. This is one of the keys to our institutional identity, and we strive to discover, develop and implement the synergies between research and teaching on a daily basis, as a way to improve the learning experiences of our students and the participants in all IBEI activity.

IBEI Director

International Exchange Programme

IBEI offers its students the possibility to participate in an exchange programme.

Participating in the exchange programme implies extending the master's to 18 months as students will need another semester to accommodate their stay abroad. Those students participating in the part-time option of the master's in International Relations can integrate the exchange programme in their 2-year study programme.

Those students who wish to participate in the exchange programme would spend one semester of the Master's programme at the foreign university of their choice, take a number of electives there, and the credits obtained abroad will count towards their IBEI master's degree.

Students can spend their exchange semester at any of the following partner universities located in the following cities:

IBEI celebrates the Graduation Ceremony of its Masters

In June 2019, IBEI celebrated the graduation ceremony of its master's programmes at the CaixaForum Barcelona.

Cristina Gallach, High Commissioner for the 2030 Agenda of Spain, attended the Graduation Ceremony 2019 as a keynote speaker.

Fulya Apaydin, Assistant Professor at IBEI, took part as a speaker to address the students, congratulating and encouraging them in their promising future after their studies at the IBEI. The IBEI students Vilma Adela Davalos (Master's in International Development), and Drake Palmer Starling (Master's in International Relations), participated as well giving a speech on behalf of the rest of their classmates.

Financial Aid and Scholarships

IBEI, in collaboration with other institutions, offers the possibility to apply for scholarships that partially or completely cover the tuition fees for the master's programmes.

Alumni Scholarship for a student from an African university

In 2019 a student from Ghana was able to benefit from the Alumni Scholarship to study a Master's in International Relations at IBEI. The initiative was a joint effort with Worldcoo, a company cofounded by IBEI alumnus, Sergi Figueres. Worldcoo connects committed companies with NGO's and other entities, to fund projects with a huge impact on society.

Bright Kwarteng from Ghana received the #IBElumni Scholarship and had the chance to study in Europe.

Alumni Professional Stories

Tatiana Hoecker

Master's in International Development 2017-18
World Mission Program Coordinator for the Episcopal
Diocese of West Texas
San Antonio, TX (USA)

"My master's program aided me not only in the practical learning of the international development field, but in finding new ways to problem solve and analysis issues for sustainable change. My research and communication skills improved greatly during my time at IBEI and that has helped me greatly in this position. Additionally, my thesis topic related to the work of faith-based organizations in low income countries which is what this position focuses on."

Anna De Marchi

Master's in International Security 2017-2018
Information officer and online writer at the European Commission
Brussels (Belgium)

"I decided to study International Security to learn more about rising threats such as terrorism and discover how I can be useful and prevent other people from feeling unsafe. I chose IBEI for its programme that brings together human, cyber and national security, letting students free to find their bearings while providing them with solid theoretical frameworks. Being at the crossroads of different cultures, IBEI is the ideal place to experience different points of views on what security means"

Gerard Fernández

Master's in International Relations 2014-2015
Communications Assistant for the European Forest Institute
Barcelona (Spain)

"Today I can say that I've achieved my goal of working in the field of communication for international institutions and I truly believe that my experience at IBEI has been crucial in making it happen. If someone had told me four years ago that I would now be working in an international organisation in my hometown, collaborating on projects together with the European Union and many other regional bodies in the Mediterranean basin, I wouldn't believe them at all."

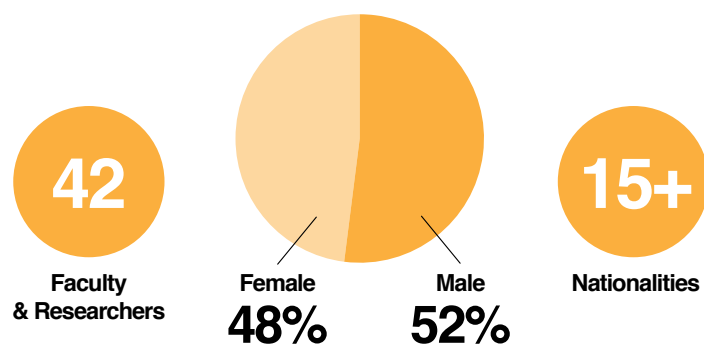

Eugenio Díaz Llabata

Master's in International Relations 2012-2013
Press Officer in the European Parliament Liaison Office
Madrid (Spain)

"The best thing about the Master's degree at IBEI was the wide spectrum of optative subjects that you can choose while attaining a common and basic knowledge in the most important aspects of International Relations. The practical sessions with debates and presentations proved to be challenging at first, but these were one of the things that I value most now that I can look back, because this are real tests of what you are going to find outside."

Highlights

1

In January 2019 IBEI launched its newest addition to its renowned master's programmes: the Research Master's in International Studies. The new Research Master's is an interdisciplinary 120-ECTS credit programme, taught in English, that combines the study of complex problems in international politics and related areas, with a strong focus on research methods in Social Sciences.

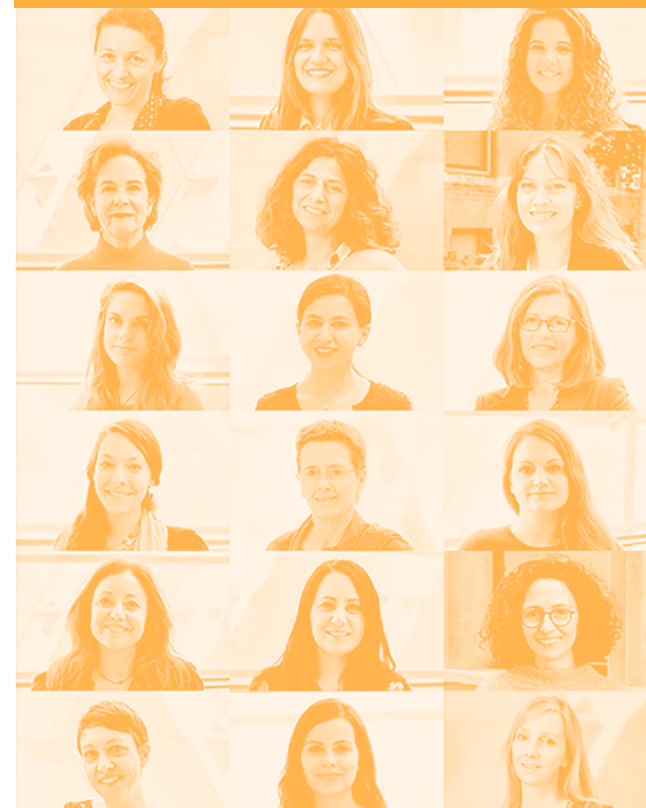

2

In July 2019, the Barcelona Science and Technology Diplomacy Hub (SciTech DiploHub) and IBEI, jointly offered a first-of-its-kind training on Science and Technology Diplomacy in a will to train the next cohort of leaders of a field that is increasingly essential to tackle humanity's global challenges.

3

During February 2019, coinciding with the International Day of Women and Girls in Science settled by the UN on 11 February, IBEI launched an initiative through its social networks in order to promote the figure of women in science, and posted a series of banners to stand out the research of its female scientists.

4

IBEI and the Barcelona Center for International Affairs (CIDOB) signed in May a collaboration agreement with the aim of harnessing and enhancing their methodological and technical resources, promoting mutual knowledge and develop joint projects.

5

On November 2019, Branko Milanovic presented his new book "Capitalism, Alone. The Future of the System That Rules the World" with Pablo Astorga and Francesc Amat as chair and discussant.

6

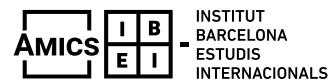

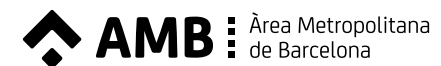

Matthias vom Hau, Associate Professor and Ramón y Cajal Researcher at IBEI, obtained an ERC Consolidator Grant to carry out his research. He was one of the 301 top scientists and scholars across Europe selected by the European Research Council (ERC) to receive the prestigious Consolidator Grants.
